OVERVIEW:

Newly-elected or appointed hospital board members come to the board with a specific set of skills and experiences gained from professional and/or volunteer activities. As a volunteer member, your contribution to ensure the ongoing viability of healthcare services in the community is admirable. Now that you are a board member, it is imperative to learn about your organization, your governance responsibilities, and the healthcare industry and environment.

OBJECTIVES:

- Describe the legal definition of a board of trustees;
- Discuss conflicts of interest and how to effectively address them;
- Identify the three fiduciary duties of governance; and
- Outline the necessary knowledge, skills, and attitudes of successful board members.

MEET YOUR FACULTY:

Tracy Warner is an experienced healthcare executive and governance subject-matter expert with knowledge gained from more than 30 years in association and hospital leadership roles. She is the founder and CEO of Board Business, a consulting firm that guides rural hospital board leadership to create efficient and effective governance processes.
